

Dr. C. Brown is an educator by trade and connector by design. She connects students, educators, and parents to information that inspires action.

This love of connecting serves as the foundation for Brown Teaching & Learning Group, her advisory company. Here students benefit from test prep, career guidance and more. First-year teachers get coaching from someone who's been there. Experienced education professionals get a resource coach and advisor.

Dr. Brown is also College Liaison for a local community college. She guides high school students through career/college preparation and collaborates with Vice Presidents, Deans, Program Chairs, and college faculty to ensure academic best practices are implemented.

Dr. Brown reaches young students, too. She is author of the children's book, me..., a fun read highlighting endless opportunities. Other titles are scheduled for release in 2018.

She does all of this using the stable, kind voice and effective work style her reputation is built on.

Dr. Brown's experience includes Principal, Dean of Students and Teacher. She received her Doctorate in Educational Leadership from University North Carolina at Charlotte, her Masters in School Administration from Gardner-Webb University and her Bachelor's in Mathematics from South Carolina State University. She has many certifications and trainings, including Principal PK-12 in North Carolina and Non-violent Crisis Prevention (CPI).

She is a member of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc., North Carolina Association of School Administrators, Higher Education Leadership Foundation, American Educational Research Association and more.

Outside of work, Dr. Brown enjoys planning social events, spending time with family, traveling with her husband and shopping excursions with her daughters.